Product Description

It is Hamburg's new maritime landmark, the Elbphilharmonie, affectionately known as the Elphi by residents and fans alike. Its most striking feature is its curved roof, which is modelled on the movement of waves. And so it is no coincidence that the two ELBHARMONIE confectionery bowls skilfully pick up on this pattern and are a beautiful reminiscence of the architectural masterpiece. Like a well-rehearsed orchestra, perfectly matched to each other, the two highly polished stainless steel bowls are eagerly awaiting their first appearance. Already in their individual performance, they convince with a strikingly elegant swing, which is modelled on a gentle wave movement. But it is only in pairs that they show their true strength: They can be arranged either behind or next to each other in different variations to form a large bowl. Several sets lined up together make an imposing picture on a long set table. Especially when they are filled with nuts, flowers or the splendid play of colours of spices.
